SPECIAL TO THE DISPATCH.

Denver, July 8.—Democratic convention after brief session adjourned until eight tonight to allow credentials committee time to prepare report.

SPECIAL TO THE DISPATCH.

Denver, July 8.—The committee on credentials completed its labors shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, after being in continuous session since 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. In nearly every instance the action of the national committee was approved, but Col. James M. Guffey lost his fight by a vote of 27 to 15. In the Idaho case the Mormon faction was put to route, the committee deciding in favor of the DuBois delegates. The fight of Oklahoma for 18 delegates instead of 14 decided in favor of increased number. The convention will probably recess too late this afternoon to allow the credentials committee to report.

Denver, July 7.—With cheers from 10,000 throats, with the swell of political oratory and the inspiring spectacle of a vast multitude of people, the Democratic national convention began its deliberations. The session, lasting a little over two hours, was more notable for its impressive magnitude and spectacular effects than for the business accomplished. It gave, however, the opportunity for the awakening echoes of convention enthusiasm, the keynote speech of the temporary presiding officer, Theodore A. Bell of California, a heated skirmish incidental to the contest in the Pennsylvania delegation, and finally a unanimous tribute of homage and respect to the memory of the late Grover Cleveland. But the enthusiasm of the opening session was comparatively brief, intermittent and tempestuous, without that long sustained and frenzied clamor which is still reserved for the future.

The day was devoted chiefly to the primary formalities, and the committees appointed are now at work perfecting the permanent organization. Meantime the convention hosts chafe over the delay which must intervene before their great purpose is accomplished—the nomination of a presidential candidate. The tide of Bryan sentiment sweeps on, gathering force as it proceeds, and the chorus of "Bryan, Bryan" is well nigh universal. With it is a steadily swelling undercurrent for the nomination of George Gray of Delaware as vice president, and this movement, at first intangible, has now assumed a definiteness which promises to merge it soon with the seemingly overwhelming current moving toward Bryan. The opponents of Bryan are still seeking to unite their strength against him, with the hope of ultimately accomplishing his defeat.

Scene a Stirring One.

It was a stirring scene which spread before Chairman Taggart when with uplifted gavel he sought to bring order out of the confused babel of sound and motion. The splendid amphitheater, decorated with flags and bunting, was packed to its uttermost limits with a dense and seething mass of humanity. Below, in the central arena, sat the delegates, just two more than an even 1,000, and back of them the 1,000 alternates—these 2,000 the real convention, with the destinies of the party in their hands. Flanking them, and sweeping around the hall were the long lines of eager, expectant onlookers, rising tier on tier and gallery on gallery, solid masses, the brightness of the women in their gay costumes vying with the splendors of Old Glory, which hung on every hand.

Here and there amid this bewildering throng stood out the notable groups of leaders. Immediately in front and under the presiding officer's eye, were ranged the Nebraska delegation, bronzed sons of the West, headed by the cowboy mayor, Dahlgren, the persona spokesman of Bryan. Well in front were the New York cohorts, with Chief Murphy, cold and impenetrable, and Judge Parker, rather serious-faced. Further back Colonel Guffey was the smiling center of his Pennsylvania adherents, and near him James Kerr, who is struggling to displace Guffey and take up the leadership. Illinois was to the left center, with the rotund Roger Sullivan to the fore.

Notables on the Platform.

Further back, Tom Johnson, the fighting mayor of Cleveland, moved among his adherents until the gavel sent him to his place among the distinguished guests upon the platform. Near him there sat a notable group—the venerable Senator Daniel of Virginia, a type of the old-time Southerner, with Towne, the vice presidential candidate and orator, and the tall, blonde, waspy Congressman Sulzer of New York. With the Virginians could be seen Governor Swanson; with Nevada Governor Dickerson and Senator Newlands; with Kentucky Senator McCreary; with Missouri Senator Stone, and occasionally ex-Governor Dockery and the redoubtable Champ Clark; with Idaho former Senators Dubois and Holtfield.

Minnesota, with the Johnson Heutenants, was poorly placed in the rear, while Delaware, with the Gray forces, was better off in the right foreground. Off to the left, the president's daughter, Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, in fetching gown and Lady Gay spanker hat, with flowing plume, smiled from one of the boxes, and from another box looked out the daughter of the Nebraska leader, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Leavitt, being as she awaited the name of her father for the presidency. On the platform, too, were many representatives of foreign countries, young Vincent de Chambrun of France, M. Grouppsky of Russia, Hon. H. F. Charles of England, and the ministers of Argentina, Greece, Belgium and Chile.

The initial outburst of enthusiasm came just as the session was opening, when a sibilant banner bearing the portrait of Bryan was displayed. Immediately there was a storm of wild applause, which died away after half a minute of explosive demonstrations.

The appearance of the temporary presiding officer, Theodore A. Bell of California, was another signal for enthusiastic outburst. He came forward amid the storm of tribute, tall and sturdy, but rather immaculate for one of the untutored, with silk-fronted Prince Albert coat, resplendent with convention medals and watch charms, giving the appearance of a decorated diplomatist. In strong, far-carrying voice and with easy gesture, he delivered the opening address, a full hour long, with resounding passages on the righting of public wrongs, punctuated with yells as some phrase tickled the fancy of the throng.

It was noticeable that great applause came from the delegates at Bell's impassioned declaration that the writ of injunction shall not be turned into an instrument of oppression. Again there was uproarious applause as he arraigned "Republican campaign contributions without a cash register."

After referring to Taft as a "bisected candidate" and demanding "but one man in the White House at a time," he adroitly turned his speech in a panegyric for Mr. Bryan, the reference to the Nebraska leader bringing forth a tumultuous demonstration.

Guffey's Forces Defeated.

The appointment of committees was quickly disposed of. For a moment the Pennsylvania row threatened to throw the assembly into wild confusion. That state presented two sets of officers representing the two contesting factions. Ollie James of Kentucky, voicing the Bryan sentiment, endeavored to refer the fight to the credentials committee. Against this, Colonel Guffey and his lieutenants, pale and gesticulating wildly, sought to interpose a protest. But it was of no avail. For a time pandemonium prevailed. And then the smooth running machinery consigned the question to the credentials committee, where Mr. Bryan's adherents are supreme, and the Guffey forces retired, full of wrath and disgust.

The presentation of resolutions of respect to the memory of Cleveland brought to the front two notable figures, Judge Parker of New York, the Democratic candidate of four years ago, and Governor Francis of Missouri, one of the surviving members of the Cleveland cabinet. The resolutions as adopted emanated from Mr. Bryan's friends and were presented by I. N. Dunn of Nebraska, who will make the nominating speech for Bryan. They were no sooner read than shouts of "Parker, Parker," showed the generous temper of the convention toward the former leader. Judge Parker was prevailed upon to mount the platform, where with resonant voice he read his own resolutions of tribute to Mr. Cleveland, closing with a tactful concession to the Bryan forces by seconding the resolutions presented by them.

Governor Francis' tribute to his former chief breathed the spirit of personal association and deep admiration. With the adoption of the resolutions, the convention adjourned for the day.

tion. For the other offices, the temporary selections were made permanent, with the addition of E. Y. Mitchell of Missouri, who was named as an assistant secretary.

The committee on rules and order of business adopted without change the rules of the convention of 1904 at St. Louis.

HITCHCOCK AND M'KINLEY

Slated for Chairman and Treasurer of Republican Committee.

Hot Springs, Va., July 8.—The executive committee of the Republican national committee when it meets here from present indications will hold only a brief session, at which Frank H. Hitchcock will be elected chairman and Representative McKinley of Illinois will be made treasurer of the national committee. Senator Hemenway and Representative Watson of Indiana, representing the Fairbanks section, Representative McKinley of Illinois, who had charge of the Cannon campaign, and Representative Burke of Pennsylvania, who represented the Knox candidacy, say that they have no objections to Hitchcock.

In the case of McKinley there is but one sentiment, and that is in his favor for the office of treasurer. Mr. McKinley has long been considered for the treasurership, but as he is treasurer of the congressional committee, it was for some time supposed the opposition to having him leave that work would operate against his selection. But that objection has been overcome by the proposition that he should be treasurer of both committees. It is said to be desirable to bring the committees into closer relationship and that a single treasurer would be in line with that policy.

TEXAS WOMAN MURDERED

Child of the Victim Supposed to Have Been Kidnapped.

Hot Springs, Ark., July 8.—The dead body of Mrs. Ada Reichers of Dallas, Tex., was found in her apartments here, she having been murdered. The body was found after neighbors had cared for her two boys over night. Another child, a girl seven years of age, is missing and is supposed to have been kidnapped by the murderer. The boys were unable to enter their home at night and believing their mother had been called away suddenly they spent the night with neighbors. In the morning entrance was forced into the house and the woman's body was discovered. Harry Reichers, husband of the woman, who lives in Dallas, has been notified. Letters found in the woman's effects indicate a separation had existed for some time.

The police are looking for a suspect who is believed to have fled to St. Louis.

A Foreign View.

Little things frequently illustrate the English view of American geography very picturesquely. An Englishman had taken the Pacific express at Philadelphia and, feeling tired, had retired to his berth. Just before he fell asleep he happened to remember that he had forgotten something, so he put his head out between the curtains and called, "Portab, portab!" The porter came. "What is it, sir?" he said. "Please wake me up when we get to San Francisco, you know."—Harper's Magazine.

Life of the Railway Man.

Trainmen are the class of workers most subject to long, irregular hours of duty, and there is nothing so likely to make a man unnerved and unfit for dangerous work as this. The strain of long hours and the restlessness of irregularity soon find out the strongest and most robust of men. Little wonder then, that we find them with prematurely gray heads.—Railroad Review.

A TALE OF PORTO RICO

Curious Story of the Haunted Sentry Box.

LIGHT ON THE OLD LEGEND.

One of the Many Mysterious Disappearances From Fort San Cristobal Accounted For by the Revelation of the Lost One Himself.

Writing in the Journal of the Military Service Institution, Captain Arthur P. S. Hyde of the coast artillery tells this curious story of "the haunted sentry box" of Fort San Cristobal, the ancient Spanish built fortress which guards the entrance to San Juan, Porto Rico:

"A number of picturesque sentry boxes built of masonry and appearing like minarets are placed at points of vantage in and around the fort. One of these on the sea front, and reached only through a long and dark tunnel from the interior of the fort, is popularly known as La Garita del Diablo, or the devil's sentry box, usually, although incorrectly, translated the haunted sentry box. This name was given to it by the Spanish soldiers for the reason that a number of sentries stationed there disappeared in a most mysterious manner and were never again heard from.

"An American officer was once on duty that took him into the remote interior of the island, and while spending one night in a small settlement he engaged in conversation with a number of the inhabitants of the place. One old man, on learning that the officer was stationed at Fort San Cristobal, became especially interested and in the course of the conversation told the following story:

"I used to be a soldier in the Spanish army and was stationed at Fort San Cristobal. A number of soldiers while on sentry duty had mysteriously disappeared from the sentry box down by the sea, and we had all become convinced that it was haunted by the devil, who, we thought, used to come and steal the soldiers away.

"One stormy night it fell to my lot to go on duty in the devil's sentry box, as we called it, at midnight, and it was with some doubts and misgivings that I went with the corporal of the guard and relieved the former sentry. When they left me I listened to the sound of their footfalls reverberating from the walls and ceiling of the dark and narrow passage, ever growing fainter and fainter as they receded, until finally the noise of the storm and the sea completely drowned it, and I was left alone with the mad elements.

"It was a mad night and one well calculated to add to the feeling of awe that the devil's sentry box always instilled into the man on duty there at night.

"Presently my attention was attracted by some lights in a small tavern on the shore below the fort, where many of us were wont to go when off duty for a glass of rum. Then I began to think that I might be able to climb down over the rocks to the shore, get a glass of rum at the tavern and return to my post.

"The more I thought of it the more determined I was to go, so finally, leaving my rifle and belt in the sentry box, I climbed over the wall and down on to the rocks and so made my way with great labor and difficulty and no little danger to the little house, where the occupants were making merry with dancing and drinking. I soon fell to and enjoyed myself with them.

"When our dancing with a fair senorita he sometimes forgets the passage of time, as I did on that fatal night, and not until long after 1 o'clock did I begin to think of returning to my post. Then, realizing that the corporal had made his inspection and had found me gone from my post and with my rifle and belt left behind, I saw only a court martial and the garrote staring me in the face, for in those days for a sentinel in the Spanish army to quit his post meant sure death, even in peace.

"To go back was out of the question. There was only one thing left for me to do, and that was to desert. My heart sank within me. If I should be captured, the same fate would be meted out to me; but, I reasoned, if I were to go back the fate would be a certainty, whereas if I deserted at least I had a chance of keeping out of sight of the authorities. I deserted and before morning was out of the city and on the way to the mountains.

"I have lived in this little hamlet for years and have never been back to the capital since that day, nor have I ever told my story to a single soul until tonight, but now that the Spaniards are gone I no longer fear for my life."

"Thus we have the story of the devil's sentry box from one of the very men who so mysteriously disappeared from it, and it would seem to be probable that the other disappearances could be accounted for in a similar manner were the truth known. Quien sabe?"

Captain Hyde mentions an interesting fact that, although for centuries Porto Rico was considered the legitimate prey of freebooters and was attacked at various times by regularly organized expeditions of the English and the Dutch during times of war, with more or less success, Fort El Morro has never been captured by an enemy, and its only surrender was to the Americans, together with the surrender of the whole island.

STREETS ARE CROWDED.

People Turn Out to Enjoy Themselves in Denver.

Denver, July 8.—Denver's exuberance over the convention took on the life and color of a midsummer carnival at night. The brilliantly illuminated streets were filled throughout the evening with a throng that overflowed from wide sidewalks into the streets and practically blocked all traffic at the intersections where the ebb and flow of the passing crowds caused a congestion. The lobbies of the downtown hotels were fairly choked with visitors and sightseers. Everywhere a spirit of gaiety prevailed, and while there was at times a decided political aspect to the celebration, it was in the main a merry-making of the people as a whole.

The music of a score of brass bands filled the air with crashing martial music and the melody of the popular songs of the day. Gaily decorated trolley cars, fairly dazzling the eye in the brilliance of their vari-colored illumination of electric bulbs, made their way over the downtown streets with bands on board playing for the crowds. The revelry lasted until well into the morning hours.

Political marching clubs, catching the spirit of the gaiety, formed impromptu parades and, carrying banners, marched through the streets to the cheers of the multitude. In the hotel lobbies there occasionally would be a conflict of interests. In one a huge banner bearing a picture of Governor Johnson called out great cheering, which broke into a veritable whirlwind of opposing demonstrations when a large banner bearing a larger picture of Mr. Bryan was carried into the midst of the throng by an enthusiastic crowd of Bryan's admirers. For half an hour or more the cheering continued. Passing bands deflected into the lobby and pandemonium reigned. Tiring at last of the single scene of action, the crowd moved on to other points and the celebration continued at high pitch.

Banker Sentenced to Prison.

Minneapolis, July 8.—Joseph U. Barnes, former president of the Minnesota Title and Trust company, prominent in religious and social circles, was sentenced by Judge Andrew Holt of the Hennepin county district court to two years at hard labor in the state prison at Stillwater. Banker Barnes was convicted on a grand larceny indictment which alleged the embezzlement of $10,000 of the company. He was released on bail pending hearing on appeal from an order denying him a new trial.

A friend once sought to learn what, in Lord Avebury's opinion, was the most suitable pet for the ordinary home.

There was a twinkle in the genial scientist's eyes as he replied: "For grownup people I think that the best pets by far are children."

A TALE OF PORTO RICO

Curious Story of the Haunted
Sentry Box.

LIGHT ON THE OLD LEGEND.

One of the Many Mysterious Disappearances From Fort San Cristobal Accounted For by the Revelation of the Lost One Himself.

Writing in the Journal of the Military Service Institution, Captain Arthur P. S. Hyde of the coast artillery tells this curious story of "the haunted sentry box" of Fort San Cristobal, the ancient Spanish built fortress which guards the entrance to San Juan, Porto Rico:

"A number of picturesque sentry boxes built of masonry and appearing like minarets are placed at points of vantage in and around the fort. One of these on the sea front, and reached only through a long and dark tunnel from the interior of the fort, is popularly known as La Garita del Diablo, or the devil's sentry box, usually, although incorrectly, translated the haunted sentry box. This name was given to it by the Spanish soldiers for the reason that a number of sentries stationed there disappeared in a most mysterious manner and were never again heard from.

"An American officer was once on duty that took him into the remote interior of the island, and while spending one night in a small settlement he engaged in conversation with a number of the inhabitants of the place. One old man, on learning that the officer was stationed at Fort San Cristobal, became especially interested and in the course of the conversation told the following story:

"I used to be a soldier in the Spanish army and was stationed at Fort San Cristobal. A number of soldiers while on sentry duty had mysteriously disappeared from the sentry box down by the sea, and we had all become convinced that it was haunted by the devil, who, we thought, used to come and steal the soldiers away.

"One stormy night it fell to my lot to go on duty in the devil's sentry box, as we called it, at midnight, and it was with some doubts and misgivings that I went with the corporal of the guard and relieved the former sentry. When they left me I listened to the sound of their footfalls reverberating from the walls and ceiling of the dark and narrow passage, ever growing fainter and fainter as they receded, until finally the noise of the storm and the sea completely drowned it, and I was left alone with the mad elements.

"It was a mad night and one well calculated to add to the feeling of awe that the devil's sentry box always instilled into the man on duty there at night.

"Presently my attention was attracted by some lights in a small tavern on the shore below the fort, where many of us were wont to go when off duty for a glass of rum. Then I began to think that I might be able to climb down over the rocks to the shore, get a glass of rum at the tavern and return to my post.

"The more I thought of it the more determined I was to go, so finally, leaving my rifle and belt in the sentry box, I climbed over the wall and down on to the rocks and so made my way with great labor and difficulty and no little danger to the little house, where the occupants were making merry with dancing and drinking. I soon fell to and enjoyed myself with them.

"When one is dancing with a fair senorita he sometimes forgets the passage of time, as I did on that fatal night, and not until long after 1 o'clock did I begin to think of returning to my post. Then, realizing that the corporal had made his inspection and had found me gone from my post and with my rifle and belt left behind, I saw only a court martial and the garrote staring me in the face, for in those days for a sentinel in the Spanish army to quit his post meant sure death, even in peace.

"To go back was out of the question. There was only one thing left for me to do, and that was to desert. My heart sank within me. If I should be captured, the same fate would be meted out to me; but, I reasoned, if I were to go back the fate would be a certainty, whereas if I deserted at least I had a chance of keeping out of sight of the authorities. I deserted and before morning was out of the city and on the way to the mountains.

"I have lived in this little hamlet for years and have never been back to the capital since that day, nor have I ever told my story to a single soul until tonight, but now that the Spaniards are gone I no longer fear for my life."

"Thus we have the story of the devil's sentry box from one of the very men who so mysteriously disappeared from it, and it would seem to be probable that the other disappearances could be accounted for in a similar manner were the truth known. Quien sabe?"

Streets are crowded.

People Turn Out to Enjoy Themselves in Denver.

Denver, July 8.—Denver's exuberance over the convention took on the life and color of a midsummer carnival at night. The brilliantly illuminated streets were filled throughout the evening with a throng that overflowed from wide sidewalks into the streets and practically blocked all traffic at the intersections where the ebb and flow of the passing crowds caused a congestion. The lobbies of the downtown hotels were fairly choked with visitors and sightseers. Everywhere a spirit of gaiety prevailed, and while there was at times a decided political aspect to the celebration, it was in the main a merrymaking of the people as a whole.

The music of a score of brass bands filled the air with crashing martial music and the melody of the popular songs of the day. Gaily decorated trolley cars, fairly dazzling the eye in the brilliance of their vari-colored illumination of electric bulbs, made their way over the downtown streets with bands on board playing for the crowds. The revelry lasted until well into the morning hours.

Political marching clubs, catching the spirit of the gaiety, formed impromptu parades and, carrying banners, marched through the streets to the cheers of the multitude. In the hotel lobbies there occasionally would be a conflict of interests. In one a huge banner bearing a picture of Governor Johnson called out great cheering, which broke into a veritable whirlwind of opposing demonstrations when a large banner bearing a larger picture of Mr. Bryan was carried into the midst of the throng by an enthusiastic crowd of Bryan's admirers. For half an hour or more the cheering continued. Passing bands deflected into the lobby and pandemonium reigned. Tiring at last of the single scene of action, the crowd moved on to other points and the celebration continued at high pitch.

Banker Sentenced to Prison.

Minneapolis, July 8.—Joseph U. Barnes, former president of the Minnesota Title and Trust company, prominent in religious and social circles, was sentenced by Judge Andrew Holt of the Hennepin county district court to two years at hard labor in the state prison at Stillwater. Banker Barnes was convicted on a grand larceny indictment which alleged the embezzlement of $10,000 of the company. He was released on bail pending hearing on appeal from an order denying him a new trial.

A friend once sought to learn what, in Lord Avebury's opinion, was the most suitable pet for the ordinary home.

There was a twinkle in the genial scientist's eyes as he replied: "For grownup people I think that the best pets by far are children."

WEDNESDAY, JULY 8, 1908

July 8 In History.

1721—Elihu Yale, founder of Yale college, died;
born in New Haven 1648.

1758—General Abercrombie attacked Ticonderoga with 15,000
men and was repulsed with a loss of 2,000.

1790—Fitz-Greene Halleck, poet, was born in Guilford, Conn.; died there 1867.

1792—The federal congress voted to make Washington the permanent seat of government.

1890—The Grand Duke George, brother of Nicholas II and heir to the throne, died at St. Petersburg; born 1878.

ASTRONOMICAL EVENTS.

Sun sets 7:29, rises 4:33; moon sets
1:01 a. m.; moon's age 11 days.

UP TO date the democrats have been unable to induce any of their number to make the race against Jacobson.

J. T. McCLEARY has filed for congress in the Second district and will make his campaign on the platform adopted by the state and national conventions.

A NEW ULM beer factory has been attached by creditors who seek to have it declared bankrupt. Is it possible that the lid is putting the manufacturers out of business?

PRINCE HELIE has finally succeeded in attaching himself to the Gould millions, although it has been a strenuous effort. Anna Gould and the Prince were married Tuesday in London.

JOHNSON and his friends have had a heap of fun out of the presidential game and by this time have probably learned new points enough to repay them for their expenditure of energy and cash.

THE democrats are having a serious time in finding a candidate to run for governor. There is little consolation in going up against a sure thing, and few men—even democrats, care to be sacrificed simply to keep the party organization up that others may profit by it.

THE business men of Walker and the citizens of that place to the number of over a hundred have signed a petition pledging their support to P. H. Mc-Garry for representative from that district. Cass Lake also seems very much in favor of the candidacy of the gentlemen from Walker.

FRED LYNCH has been made national committeeman from Minnesota as a result of his prominence in the democratic squabble for pre-eminence for his friend Johnson. The friends of Mr.
Lynch in Crow Wing county, where he is considered almost a resident, are pleased to see him recognized.

THE coming week will probably be the busiest one the cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis have seen for many a day.
The national meeting of the Shriners will bring thousands of visitors to the cities and the prominence of the occasion will attract many outsiders. Elaborate arrangements have been made to handle the crowds.

AT St. Cloud where a telephone war has been waged and where a franchise was asked for a competing company, the Northwestern Telephone company have made a proposition to the city council to reduce their rates 50 cents per month on business and private telephones and 25 cents on party residence lines, to be effective August 1. The committee recommended that the application of the new company be turned down if this rate card is put into effect.

A Befogged Tail.

"I had a hog," said Colonel Forbes
of Marysville, "that got to curling its tail in the shape of a figure 8; always held it that way. Had a hired man working for me, kind of an animal trainer. He took to working with the hog; pretty soon trained him to change
the 8 to a 6 and then to a 9 and then to a 2 and a 3. Had him trained fine.
Did it by holding just as many grains
of corn in his palm. When the hog figured right he'd get the corn.

"Hired man had an idea he could make a lot of money down at the state fair showing his tail figuring hog. I sold him the hog for $10."

"What came of it?" asked a listener.

"Well, the stunt was to have the hog guess at people's ages, 10 cents a guess.
Big hit! Moved him down to San Francisco; fog took all curl out of the hog's tail; never could figure after that."—
San Francisco Chronicle.

Loss of Sleep

EXHAUSTED NERVES.

Nature always gives ample warning of the approach of nervous collapse, if you can but read the signs. Among the earliest indications of nervous exhaustion is inability to rest and sleep. You lie awake and think, think, think but cannot quiet your brain and nerves to sleep.
Opium and narcotics cannot possibly afford more than temporary relief and leave you worse off than before. Cure can only be brought about by the restoration of the nervous system by the use of

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills

You can be positively cured of sleeplessness, headaches, and nervous dyspepsia and
stop the approach of nervous prostration, paralysis or loco-motor ataxia by the use of this treatment. Be sure to see the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D., on the box, 50 cents at all dealers, or Dr. A. W.
Chase Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. C. G. Heckenlively, Angola, Ind.,
states:

"I have used Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills
for sleeplessness and a run down nervous system with excellent results. They give sleep in the right way, not by the opiate plan, but by their tonic and uplifting effect on the nerves."

H. P. DUNN.

Plea For Reform In Escort Duty.

"I think a man in escorting a woman always should walk between her
and the other persons on the sidewalk," said an American who recently returned to the United States from Germany after several years there. "I am much opposed to the custom by which a man in accompanying a woman in the street always walks nearer the curb. The Germans have settled that question admirably. A German invariably walks nearer to the center
line of the pavement than the woman does and thus protects her from the jostling to which American women
often are subjected. In a throng American men and women turn to the right in passing, and consequently if the escort by the American custom is on the right of the woman persons going
in the opposite direction bump into her.
If the escort walked on the inside he would be her guard."

Biggest Post Card For Taft.

William H. Taft, Republican candidate for president, recently received
the largest picture post card ever made.
It was three and one-half feet in length
and one and one-half feet in width.
On the back was a large full size picture of Mr. Taft, taken a few days ago
as he was about to board a train for Cincinnati. The ex-secretary was standing at the bottom of the platform
of the car with one hand on the railing. His face wore the usual broad and expansive Taft smile. The card was signed by two railroad men, who congratulated the ex-secretary on his nomination. In addition to the regular postage the card bore a special delivery
stamp.

New Fashion In Cards.

A new fashion in visiting cards is coming into vogue in England. This is to print on the back of the card a little plan showing the residence and the adjacent streets. One well known Liberal member of parliament, for instance, has on the back of his cards a plan of Gray's Inn in London which shows at a glance where his rooms are situated.

We are so certain that itching, bleeding and protruding Piles can always be relieved and absolutely cured by this ointment that we positively guarantee satisfaction or money refunded.

Making and Saving Money

No valuable thing comes easy.
A fat bank account is a cheerful thing to contemplate, but to secure it is no snap. No man can accumulate without using the services of a good bank, and there is where we come in. We help in the saving process, we make it easy and convenient to save and we encourage the habit by paying you for doing it. If you have not opened an account yet, begin next pay day. Get a start, if only with a five dollar bill or open a savings account, which requires only $1.00 for the first deposit. You owe it to your family and yourself to save something.

A Befogged Tail.

"I had a hog," said Colonel Forbes
of Marysville, "that got to curling its tail in the shape of a figure 8; always held it that way. Had a hired man working for me, kind of an animal trainer. He took to working with the hog; pretty soon trained him to change
the 8 to a 6 and then to a 9 and then
to a 2 and a 3. Had him trained fine.
Did it by holding just as many grains
of corn in his palm. When the hog figured right he'd get the corn.

"Hired man had an idea he could
make a lot of money down at the state fair showing his tail figuring hog. I
sold him the hog for $10."

"What came of it?" asked a listener.

"Well, the stunt was to have the hog
guess at people's ages, 10 cents a guess.
Big hit! Moved him down to San Francisco; fog took all curl out of the hog's
tail; never could figure after that."—

Loss of Sleep

EXHAUSTED NERVES.

Nature always gives ample warning of the approach of nervous collapse, if you can but
read the signs. Among the earliest indications of nervous exhaustion is inability to rest and sleep. You lie awake and think, think, think,
but cannot quiet your brain and nerves to sleep.
Opium and narcotics cannot possibly alford more than temporary relief and leave
you worse off than before. Cure can only be brought about by the restoration of the nervous system by the use of

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills

You can be positively cured of sleeplessness, headaches, and nervous dyspepsia and
stop the approach of nervous prostration,
paralysis or loco-motor ataxia by the use of this treatment. Be sure to see the portrait
and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D., on

Mrs. C. G. Heckenlively, Angola, Ind.,
states:

"I have used Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills
for sleeplessness and a run down nervous system with excellent results. They give sleep in the right way, not by the opiate plan, but by their tonic and upbuilding effect on
the nerves."

Plea For Reform In Escort Duty.

"I think a man in escorting a woman always should walk between her
and the other persons on the sidewalk," said an American who recently returned to the United States from Germany after several years there. "I am much opposed to the custom by which a man in accompanying a woman in the street always walks nearer
the curb. The Germans have settled that question admirably. A German invariably walks nearer to the center
line of the pavement than the woman
does and thus protects her from the jostling to which American women
often are subjected. In a throng American men and women turn to the right
in passing, and consequently if the escort by the American custom is on the right of the woman persons going
in the opposite direction bump into her.
If the escort walked on the inside he
would be her guard."

Biggest Post Card For Taft.

William H. Taft, Republican candidate for president, recently received
the largest picture post card ever made.
It was three and one-half feet in length
and one and one-half feet in width.
On the back was a large full size picture of Mr. Taft, taken a few days ago
as he was about to board a train for Cincinnati. The ex-secretary was standing at the bottom of the platform
of the car with one hand on the railing. His face wore the usual broad
and expansive Taft smile. The card
was signed by two railroad men, who congratulated the ex-secretary on his nomination. In addition to the regular postage the card bore a special delivery
stamp.

New Fashion In Cards.

A new fashion in visiting cards is coming into vogue in England. This is to print on the back of the card a little plan showing the residence and
the adjacent streets. One well known Liberal member of parliament, for instance, has on the back of his cards a plan of Gray's Inn in London which shows at a glance where his rooms are situated.

RESUME LONG CRUISE

Battleships Leave San Francisco for Hampton Roads.

NEBRASKA IS LEFT BEHIND

Outbreak of Scarlet Fever Among the Crew Necessitates Her Being Placed in Quarantine—Will Join the Fleet at Honolulu.

San Francisco, July 8.—Fifteen battleships of the Atlantic fleet sailed from here on the voyage that is to take them around the world and end at Hampton Roads, whence they started last December. The sixteenth member of the fleet, the Nebraska, was left behind because of an outbreak of scarlet fever among the crew. She will be placed in quarantine three days and thoroughly fumigated, after which she will join her sister ships at Honolulu.

Without ceremony or celebration of any sort the fifteen big fighting ships got under way promptly upon signal from the Connecticut, Rear Admiral Sperry's flagship, and steaming in single column slowly wended their way out of the bay where they had found anchorage from time to time since their arrival here just two months ago. A few small craft followed in the wake of the fleet as far as Golden Gate and gave the big white ships a parting salute with their sirens, while on the hills were scattered groups of people silently watching their departure, which was in striking contrast to its enthusiastic reception on its arrival May 5.

The vessels presented a beautiful appearance as they steamed through the harbor. As the Connecticut passed forth, the flagship signalled for more speed, and the bows of the warships were soon throwing up a sea of white foam as they plowed through the water. It was 3:10 p. m. when the Kentucky, the last ship in line, passed the lighthouse at the entrance to the Golden Gate, and half an hour later the fleet was lost to view in a dense cloud of black smoke.

Prepare for Departure.

The forenoon was one of busy preparation on the fleet; launches and cutters dotted the harbor, flitting from ship to ship and ship to shore. On the flagship Connecticut signal flags were constantly breaking out and the incessant "zip, zip," of the wireless telegraph communication with ships and sending farewell messages to shore stations never ceased. Boats were made fast, orderlies ran to and fro and a few visitors, newspaper men and relatives and friends of the officers came forward to say a last goodbye.

Secretary of the Interior Garfield boarded the Connecticut to pay his respects to Admiral Sperry. He was given seventeen guns, the salute that members of the president's cabinet are entitled to, when he took his leave.

On the waterfront patrols of blue jackets with stout "billyes" rounded up a few belated stragglers from the various ships, and the last boat left shore with mail orderlies.

Lieutenant Commander Benjamin E. Hutchinson, executive officer of the cruiser St. Louis, was hurriedly detached from that ship and assigned as an executive officer of the battleship Wisconsin in place of Lieutenant Commander Phelps. The latter was ordered to Mare Island on account of illness. Dr. Koltze, Jr., surgeon on the Connecticut, and two surgeons from other ships were temporarily transferred to the Nebraska to assist in treating the scarlet fever cases on that ship.

Just before the fleet sailed Rear Admiral Sperry received a telegram from President Roosevelt, conferring to the fleet his heartiest good wishes upon the eve of its departure.

WANTS TO GET HIS CHILDREN

Count Boni Brings Action Following Gould-De Sagan Wedding.

Paris, July 8.—Count Boni de Castellane, accompanied by his counsel, went to the office of Judge Henri Ditté, president of the tribunal of the first instance of the Seine, and applied to have the custody of his children restored to him on account of his divorced wife's marriage to Prince Helle de Sagan, which occurred in London Tuesday.

Wins the Lipton Cup.

New York, July 8.—Frederick W. Thompson's eighty-four-foot schooner yacht, the Shamrock, won the $1,000 Lipton cup offered for the 325-mile race from New York to Cape May and return, and Captain Charles Barr, her skipper, has added another victory to his string according to a decision of the Brooklyn Yacht club. The Shamrock beat her nearest competitor, the Mimosa III., by more than two hours elapsed time and several of the smaller boats nearly twenty hours.

Indians Defy Laws.

Muskogee, Okla., July 8.—The sheriffs of McIntosh and Okmulgee counties went to the Old Hickory grounds near Henrie to investigate the uprising of Snake Indians, and were driven away from the camp by thirty armed Indians and negroes. Crazy Snake delivered a message defying the laws of the state and the United States government.

ONLY HOPE OF ALLIES

Possibility of Revolt Against Tactics of Bryanites.

SUPPLIES RALLYING GROUND

Guffey-Bryan Fight Furnishes an Issue on Which the Opponents of the Nebraska Candidate Can Take Their Stand.

Denver, July 8.—The possibility of a revolt by delegates not in sympathy with the Bryan control of the Democratic national convention against the parliamentary practices employed by officers of the convention in sending the Pennsylvania controversy to the committee on credentials, is the one hope left to the allied opposition to Mr. Bryan's nomination. This opposition is proceeding on the belief that the committee on credentials will report against the contested delegates from Philadelphia in favor of the election of Colonel James M. Guffey for national committeeman, in which event a minority report will be made. The first test of anti-Bryan strength therefore will occur over the adoption of the report of the committee on credentials and it promises to be the bitterest of the convention. Should it be decided against the Bryan men, some of whom announced a purpose to "railroad" the Pennsylvania leader out of the party in accordance with the expressed wish of the Nebraska candidate, unquestionably it will encourage the opposition to Mr. Bryan to renewed efforts to defeat him for the presidential nomination. No sooner had the convention adjourned than the anti-Bryan men began to gather to discuss the situation.

After several of these informal conferences the consensus of opinion was that the Guffey-Bryan fight furnished an issue on which the anti-Bryan men could take their stand and supplied the rallying ground that has been needed in order to concentrate their forces. It was asserted by anti-Bryan men that the refusal of Temporary Chairman Bell to recognize the demand of Guffey men for a roll call on the question of sending the Pennsylvania case to the credentials committee has brought to them many recruits, and that these, added to the force that has been against Mr. Bryan on all other points, promises victory for Colonel Guffey. On the other hand, the Bryan men claim to have Colonel Guffey's scalp already dangling at the belt of their leader and declare that they are not worried in the least.

WATCHES THE BULLETINS.

Bryan Keeps in Close Touch With Denver Convention.

Lincoln, Neb., July 8.—There were few visitors at Fairview, and none of importance in a political way. This did not, however, mean that Mr. Bryan was not busy. His day began early, and before his breakfast was completed the special wire between his office and Denver was pouring in telegrams which required replies.

Although there has been a permanent telegraph office established in a cottage in close proximity to the Bryan home, for convention purposes, a special wire was run to his office, and at his desk, near which the telegraph operator had been placed, Mr. Bryan spent most of his time until the Denver convention adjourned temporarily.

Visiting delegations and calls of personages high in the councils of the party during the past five days had given the Democratic leader but little opportunity to read his voluminous correspondence, and much of his time was devoted to that duty. With his confidential stenographer he went over his mail, stopping only to make reply to the numerous telegrams which were placed on his desk during the early part of the day.

To persistent inquiries as to whether he would go to the Denver convention, Mr. Bryan stated that at present he had no thought of doing so, and knew of no contingency which might arise to take him to Denver. "You cannot tell what the future will bring forth," he said, "but I know now of nothing which will take me to the convention city."

Mr. Bryan watched the convention bulletins closely and those reporting occasions which brought forth applause from the big Denver gathering were read with evident satisfaction and contented smiles, but not with looks of surprise.

RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE.

Will Not Report to the Convention Until Thursday.

Denver, July 8.—The committee on resolutions of the Democratic national convention will not report to the convention until Thursday. At an early hour this morning the sub-committee which is drafting the platform temporarily adjourned at the suggestion of Senator Stone of Missouri. The full committee was instructed to assemble at 5 p. m. today, at which time the sub-committee expects to be able to report. The convention will be asked to meet at 10 o'clock a. m. on Thursday, and it is the plan to have the report ready for presentation at that time with the idea of having it disposed of by noon.

Immediately after being called to order the platform committee proceeded to carry out the wishes of Mr.

BELL VISITS BRYAN

Temporary Chairman Makes Trip Under Difficulties.

TRAIN HALTED BY WASHOUT

So Californian Had to Walk Part of the Way and Wade Through a Lake. Took a Handcar on His Return Journey.

Lincoln, Neb., July 7.—Theodore A. Bell, temporary chairman of the Democratic convention, a passenger on a train bound from California to the convention at Denver, was appointed by California delegates to visit Fairview and notify Mr. Bryan that Nathan Cole had been selected as national committeeman for California, and that Cole and Bell, after a heated argument, much exaggerated in newspaper reports, had finished by agreeing to work shoulder to shoulder in support of the ticket to be chosen at the capital of Colorado.

In pursuit of this mission, Mr. Bell journeyed without incident from Ogden, Utah, to Omaha, and with many difficulties, to Lincoln.

Ten hours were consumed by Mr. Bell in making the fifty-five miles between Omaha and Lincoln. His train was side-tracked at half a dozen points for other trains and was held at a spot five miles from Lincoln for several hours because of a flood which had all but put the Rock Island railroad out of business.

The train was halted by a washout and facing a condition and not a theory, Bell, grip in hand, started to walk to the city. He encountered half a mile of track under water and bravely waded through the lake, part of the time up to his knees in water, landing on the terra firma when he reached the city limits. He walked to the Lincoln hotel, two miles away, and after securing a bite of breakfast, started for Fairview in a carriage. A deluge of rain which had fallen for nine hours made the journey a perilous one, and when the driver of the cab finally reached the suburban farm of Mr. Bryan, his team was almost exhausted.

Bryan Anxiously Awaited Him.

The Democratic leader had anticipated the visit of Mr. Bell, having been in anxious consultation with railroad officials.

Despite the fact that he had less than half an hour in which to confer with the Democratic leader, Mr. Bell covered the questions of his speech and other matters he had in mind when he left Ogden. Principal of these was his address as temporary chairman, and particular attention was given to the portion of it which referred to the campaign publicity plank. Mr. Bell took occasion also during his stay at Fairview to fully acquaint Mr. Bryan with conditions in California, and of the features which occurred during the trip eastward.

When Mr. Bell reached the Rock Island station, over three hours later, he found a handcar awaiting him. The strenuous day had given him little opportunity to sustain the inner man, and anticipating this condition, an elaborate supply of edibles had been piled upon the handcar.

The scene of the departure was full of comedy and drama. Standing on the front of the handcar, Chairman Bell displayed his six feet of height preparatory to the start, while a dozen photographers tried to snap the scene during a downpour of rain. The temporary chairman is the act of propelling a handcar out of town in order to reach the scene of real activity proved of sufficient interest to bring a crowd of people to the little station despite the weather, and as he rested his weight on the handle of the car a parting cheer was given him by the members of the reception committee.

Mr. Bell was furnished a special train on the west side of the washout near Rockaway, Neb., and is scheduled to arrive in Denver several hours before the convention is to be called to order.

"I tell yez, he's a smart feller. He knows a thing or two."
"That's just about all he does know."

On the waterfront patrols of blue-jackets with stout "billys" rounded up a few belated stragglers from the various ships, and the last boat left shore with mail orderlies.

Lieutenant Commander Benjamin E. Hutchinson, executive officer of the cruiser St. Louis, was hurriedly detached from that ship and assigned as an executive officer of the battleship Wisconsin in place of Lieutenant Commander Phelps. The latter was ordered to Mare Island on account of illness. Dr. Koltze, Jr., surgeon on the Connecticut, and two surgeons from other ships were temporarily transferred to the Nebraska to assist in treating the scarlet fever cases on that ship.

Just before the fleet sailed Rear Admiral Sperry received a telegram from President Roosevelt, conferring to the fleet his heartiest good wishes upon the eve of its departure.

Count Boni Brings Action Following Gould-De Sagan Wedding.

Paris, July 8.—Count Boni de Castellane, accompanied by his counsel, went to the office of Judge Henri Ditté, president of the tribunal of the first instance of the Seine, and applied to have the custody of his children restored to him on account of his divorced wife's marriage to Prince Helle de Sagan, which occurred in London Tuesday.

Wins the Lipton Cup.

New York, July 8.—Frederick W. Thompson's eighty-four-foot schooner yacht, the Shamrock, won the $1,000 Lipton cup offered for the 325-mile race from New York to Cape May and return, and Captain Charles Barr, her skipper, has added another victory to his string according to a decision of the Brooklyn Yacht club. The Shamrock beat her nearest competitor, the Mimosa III., by more than two hours elapsed time and several of the smaller boats nearly twenty hours.

Indians Defy Laws.

Muskogee Okla., July 8.—The sheriffs of McIntosh and Okmulgee counties went to the Old Hickory grounds near Henrietta to investigate the uprising of Snake Indians, and were driven away from the camp by thirty armed Indians and negroes. Crazy Snake delivered a message defying the laws of the state and the United States government.

ONLY HOPE OF ALLIES

Possibility of Revolt Against Tactics of Bryanites.

SUPPLIES RALLYING GROUND

Guffey-Bryan Fight Furnishes an Issue on Which the Opponents of the Nebraska Candidate Can Take Their Stand.

Denver, July 8.—The possibility of a revolt by delegates not in sympathy with the Bryan control of the Democratic national convention against the parliamentary practices employed by officers of the convention in sending the Pennsylvania controversy to the committee on credentials, is the one hope left to the allied opposition to Mr. Bryan's nomination. This opposition is proceeding on the belief that the committee on credentials will report against the contested delegates from Philadelphia in favor of the election of Colonel James M. Guffey for national committeeman, in which event a minority report will be made. The first test of anti-Bryan strength therefore will occur over the adoption of the report of the committee on credentials and it promises to be the bitterest of the convention. Should it be decided against the Bryan men, some of whom announced a purpose to "railroad" the Pennsylvania leader out of the party in accordance with the expressed wish of the Nebraska candidate, unquestionably it will encourage the opposition to Mr. Bryan to renewed efforts to defeat him for the presidential nomination. No sooner had the convention adjourned than the anti-Bryan men began to gather to discuss the situation.

After several of these informal conferences the consensus of opinion was that the Guffey-Bryan fight furnished an issue on which the anti-Bryan men could take their stand and supplied the rallying ground that has been needed in order to concentrate their forces. It was asserted by anti-Bryan men that the refusal of Temporary Chairman Bell to recognize the demand of Guffey men for a roll call on the question of sending the Pennsylvania case to the credentials committee has brought to them many recruits, and that these, added to the force that has been against Mr. Bryan on all other points, promises victory for Colonel Guffey. On the other hand, the Bryan men claim to have Colonel Guffey's scalp already dangling at the belt of their leader and declare that they are not worried in the least.

WATCHES THE BULLETINS.

Bryan Keeps in Close Touch With Denver Convention.

Lincoln, Neb., July 8.—There were few visitors at Fairview, and none of importance in a political way. This did not, however, mean that Mr. Bryan was not busy. His day began early, and before his breakfast was completed the special wire between his office and Denver was pouring in telegrams which required replies.

Although there has been a permanent telegraph office established in a cottage in close proximity to the Bryan home, for convention purposes, a special wire was run to his office, and at his desk, near which the telegraph operator had been placed, Mr. Bryan spent most of his time until the Denver convention adjourned temporarily.

Visiting delegations and calls of personages high in the councils of the party during the past five days had given the Democratic leader but little opportunity to read his voluminous correspondence, and much of his time was devoted to that duty. With his confidential stenographer he went over his mail, stopping only to make reply to the numerous telegrams which were placed on his desk during the early part of the day.

To persistent inquiries as to whether he would go to the Denver convention, Mr. Bryan stated that at present he had no thought of doing so, and knew of no contingency which might arise to take him to Denver. "You cannot tell what the future will bring forth," he said, "but I know now of nothing which will take me to the convention city."

Mr. Bryan watched the convention bulletins closely and those reporting occasions which brought forth applause from the big Denver gathering were read with evident satisfaction and contented smiles, but not with looks of surprise.

RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE.

Will Not Report to the Convention Until Thursday.

Denver, July 8.—The committee on resolutions of the Democratic national convention will not report to the convention until Thursday. At an early hour this morning the sub-committee which is drafting the platform temporarily adjourned at the suggestion of Senator Stone of Missouri. The full committee was instructed to assemble at 5 p. m. today, at which time the sub-committee expects to be able to report. The convention will be asked to meet at 10 o'clock a. m. on Thursday, and it is the plan to have the report ready for presentation at that time with the idea of having it disposed of by noon.

Immediately after being called to order the platform committee proceeded to carry out the wishes of Mr.

BELL VISITS BRYAN

Temporary Chairman Makes Trip Under Difficulties.

TRAIN HALTED BY WASHOUT

So Californian Had to Walk Part of the Way and Wade Through a Lake. Took a Handcar on His Return Journey.

Lincoln, Neb., July 7.—Theodore A. Bell, temporary chairman of the Democratic convention, a passenger on a train bound from California to the convention at Denver, was appointed by California delegates to visit Fairview and notify Mr. Bryan that Nathan Cole had been selected as national committeeman for California, and that Cole and Bell, after a heated argument, much exaggerated in newspaper reports, had finished by agreeing to work shoulder to shoulder in support of the ticket to be chosen at the capital of Colorado.

In pursuit of this mission, Mr. Bell journeyed without incident from Ogden, Utah, to Omaha, and with many difficulties, to Lincoln.

Ten hours were consumed by Mr. Bell in making the fifty-five miles between Omaha and Lincoln. His train was side-tracked at half a dozen points for other trains and was held at a spot five miles from Lincoln for several hours because of a flood which had all but put the Rock Island railroad out of business.

The train was halted by a washout and facing a condition and not a theory, Bell, grip in hand, started to walk to the city. He encountered half a mile of track under water and bravely waded through the lake, part of the time up to his knees in water, landing on the terra firma when he reached the city limits. He walked to the Lincoln hotel, two miles away, and after securing a bite of breakfast, started for Fairview in a carriage. A deluge of rain which had fallen for nine hours made the journey a perilous one, and when the driver of the cab finally reached the suburban farm of Mr. Bryan, his team was almost exhausted.

Bryan Anxiously Awaited Him.

The Democratic leader had anticipated the visit of Mr. Bell, having been in anxious consultation with railroad officials.

Despite the fact that he had less than half an hour in which to confer with the Democratic leader, Mr. Bell covered the questions of his speech and other matters he had in mind when he left Ogden. Principal of these was his address as temporary chairman, and particular attention was given to the portion of it which referred to the campaign publicly plank. Mr. Bell took occasion also during his stay at Fairview to fully acquaint Mr. Bryan with conditions in California, and of the features which occurred during the trip eastward.

When Mr. Bell reached the Rock Island station, over three hours later, he found a handcar awaiting him. The strenuous day had given him little opportunity to sustain the inner man, and anticipating this condition, an elaborate supply of edibles had been piled upon the handcar.

The scene of the departure was full of comedy and drama. Standing on the front of the handcar, Chairman Bell displayed his six feet of height preparatory to the start, while a dozen photographers tried to snap the scene during a downpour of rain. The temporary chairman in the act of propelling a handcar out of town in order to reach the scene of real activity proved of sufficient interest to bring a crowd of people to the little station despite the weather, and as he rested his weight on the handle of the car a parting cheer was given him by the members of the reception committee.

Mr. Bell was furnished a special train on the west side of the washout near Rockaway, Neb., and is scheduled to arrive in Denver several hours before the convention is to be called to order.

Address of Temporary Chairman of the Democratic National Convention.

REPUBLICAN PARTY ARRAIGNED

Special Attention Given to Platform Adopted at Chicago.

Attitude of the Democratic Party
Toward the Regulation of Transportation Companies—Election of Senator.

Theodore A. Bell of California, upon taking the chair as temporary chairman of the Democratic national convention, spoke, in part, as follows:

"We have assembled at a time when the public conscience is demanding honesty of purpose in the men who undertake to direct the affairs of the state. The public eye is keenly sensitive to every political movement, and our proceedings here will be approved according to the degree of sincerity appearing in the work of this convention. There is a widespread belief founded upon evidence of a convincing character, that the party in power has not been true to its trust, that it has betrayed the common interest into the hands of the enemies of good government, thereby forfeiting its right and destroying its ability to rule in the name of the people.

"Apparent to everyone is the fact that way down deep in the heart of the Republican convention at Chicago there was a feeling of anger and resentment over the popular clamor for reforms; and it is equally patent that there is no bona fide intention on the part of the Republicans of granting any reforms, if the machinery of that party can be retained in present hands. Its gaudy platform, divided like ancient Gaul into three parts—barren promises, makeshifts and evasions, it is hoped will make a good campaign transparency; but no one seriously believes the Republican party endorses that neutral manuscript which held the convention together until it could ratify the nomination of a presidential candidate.

"Approaching our great task in a manly, dignified manner, imbued with the loftiest sentiments of patriotism, ambitious to throw every safeguard around the liberties of our people, determined to stamp out the abuses that are consuming the substance of the nation, let us proceed to our appointed duty with the sustaining consciousness that we are responsible alone to God and to our country for the justice of our cause.

"There are three things that this convention should do. It ought to present in a plain and intelligent manner the serious industrial and present conditions that are disturbing the peace and happiness of our country. We should then proceed to a courageous exposure of the Republican policies that are co-operating with private greed in the general oppression of the people. Most important of all, we must exhibit a readiness and an ability to grasp the problems of the hour and to effect their solution in a manner that will satisfy the sober, common sense of the multitudes whose interests are at stake.

"Among the great evils that afflict the country at the present time is the abuse of corporate power. At first the advancing aggressions of the corporations are not discernible to the common eye, for every move is carefully covered up until sufficient political strength is attained to defy the protests of the people. Thus the constant and insidious invasion of the people's rights finally results in a species of arrogance and defiance so formidable in its appearance that the body of the people, in fear of even worse aggressions, hesitate to exercise their rightful authority over these colossal enemies of the commonwealth. And so we behold a subversion of our free institutions, a government voluntarily subordinating itself to selfish, private ends, special privileges resorting to cunning, bribery and intimidation to maintain its unholy power, while the masses timidly ask that when avarice has at last reached the point of satiety it will then benevolently permit the people to resume their rightful share in the government themselves.

"The Democratic party is not an enemy of all corporations. It recognizes their great value in the industrial world. Through the agency of incorporation scattered wealth is brought together and given a driving force that it would not otherwise possess. Great enterprises are thereby undertaken and the undeveloped resources of the country added to the wealth of the world. No rational man can be opposed to corporations as such and the assertion that the Democratic party is waging an indiscriminate war against this convenient form of transacting business has no foundation in fact. It is the abuse only of corporate power that we seek to eliminate.

"We are confronted with the inquiry, what assurance has the Republican party given that it will use the forces at its command to restore the people to their rights? In its Chicago platform it did not make even a decent pretense of championing the people's cause and the proceedings of that convention are glaringly insincere. It was noted that the elements were present in that gathering, one with sufficient votes to adopt a platform and name its candidate for president, the other powerful enough to unwrite that platform and tie the hands of the nominee. The distinguishing feature of the Chicago platform is its oft-repeated promise to do a lot of things that the Republican party has heretofore failed to do. That party went to Chicago fresh from the halls of congress, where an overwhelming Republican majority in both branches enabled it to propose to and adopt any legislation that it chose. Does the Republican party believe that it can be absolved from its dereliction of duty by an empty promise to do in the future what it has wilfully failed to do in the past?

"Some one suggested that this convention should publish an indictment against the Republican party. We can probably expedite the proceedings by entering the plea of guilty that is contained in the Chicago platform, simply changing the words 'We will' to the words 'We did not' to conform to the admitted facts. We then have the following confession of guilt:

"We did not revise the tariff."

"We did not amend the anti-trust laws to secure greater effectiveness in the prosecution of criminal monopolies."

"We did not add a single line to the interstate commerce law, giving the federal government supervision over the issues of stocks and bonds by interstate carriers."

"We did not exact a currency measure that would mitigate the evils of a financial panic such as has recently protracted the country under a Republican administration."

"We did not limit the opportunities for abusing the writ of injunction."

"We did not establish postal savings banks."

"We did not establish a bureau of mines and mining."

"We did not admit into the union the territories of New Mexico and Arizona as separate states."

"The last congress was in session during a financial crisis when innumerable banking institutions, preferring a holiday to a funeral, closed their doors and filled the minds of the millions of depositors with anxiety and fear. The sentiment in favor of postal savings banks which had been steadily growing in this country, became almost universal during the recent panic. So insistent became the voice of the people that the president sent a special message to congress urging the establishment of postal savings banks where the earnings of our people might be safely deposited under the direct control and responsibility of the federal government, and where no speculating bank cashier or any member of the board of directors could eat up the savings of years.

"The United States senate showed its hearty sympathy with this popular demand and its profound respect for the president by adjourning the senate while the message was being read, while over in the house of representatives they refused to suspend the roll call of the house to receive the communication which had been sent them from the White House.

"The Chicago platform points with pride to the passage of a child labor law for the District of Columbia. Let the Republican party go further than the enactment of penal laws and in the name of humanity use its vast energies for the removal of the conditions that are forcing our children into the labor market. It is the reign of monopoly that is emptying our school houses and filling the sweat shops with child labor and this same system of monopoly is fast limiting the opportunities for independent livelihood among those who are forced into the industrial field and thus it is doubly blighting that hope of youth which in former stages of our national growth opened an avenue of honor and independence to every child upon our soil.

"The most palpable instance of the insincerity of the Chicago platform is found in its declaration respecting the issuance of injunctions. It would have been entitled to more respect if it had omitted all mention of it. At session after session of congress, labor has pleaded for relief from the abuses of injunctions, but its appeals have fallen on deaf ears and there has been no indication that remedial legislation of any character would be enacted. The oligarchy in house and senate has decided that nothing shall be done to weaken any advantage that corporations have gained in labor disputes.

"The charge that the courts are being assailed is simply made for the purpose of diverting attention from the real issue. Heretofore it has not been considered treason or an unwarrantable attack upon the honor of the courts to define their jurisdiction, prescribe their procedure, restrict their processes and generally to fix the bounds within which judicial functions shall be exercised.

"It makes no difference whether the courts are acting in excess of their jurisdiction or strictly within their delegated powers. In either case the people have a right to throw additional safeguards around human liberty. There can be no reflection upon the honesty of the courts in the passage of a measure that will confine the equity powers of the federal judiciary within such bounds as the people of the United States, through the legislative branches of their government may determine. This Democratic convention must formally and unequivocally pledge itself to such legislation as will prevent the writ of injunction from being converted into an instrument of oppression.

"We have something to do in this convention besides pointing out evils and taking the Republican party to task for the part it has played in creating and perpetrating abuses. Democracy is once more called to the front to battle for the secret principles of self-government. It must wage an uncompromising war for the return of the government to the hands of the people, and this means that the phalanx of special interest must be broken. With the power and opportunity to carry out Democratic principles, we will be called upon to revise our tariff laws in the interests of the whole people. This issue cannot be disposed of by the assertion that the Republican party also stands for tariff reform. Republican revision and Democratic revision are two different things.

"The Democratic idea is that where tariff enables the trusts to maintain a system of extortion the duty should be removed from all trust-made goods, so that competition from abroad may compel reasonable prices to our own people. There is a vast difference between the protection of American industries and the protection of criminal monopolies.

"The expense of our government, even when most economically administered will always require substantial tariff rates, for the customs duties will always be our chief source of revenue. The amount and distribution of these rates must always be delivered along equitable lines, keeping in view the greatest happiness to the greatest number and particularly withholding the shelter of the tariff from those who use it, not for legitimate self protection, but for the criminal purpose of extorting the last dollar from the American consumer.

"The corrupt use of large sums of money in political campaigns is largely responsible for the subversion of the people's will at the polls. The masses are awakening to a realization of the great power of gold in contests that ought to be determined according to the character of nominees and the soundness and morality of political issues; and there is a general demand for publicity in the collection and use of campaign funds so that our citizens may know whether a political party has purchased its way into office or has won its victories by honest means.

"In the Chicago convention a minority report of the committee on resolutions, containing a declaration in favor of publicity was overwhelmingly defeated upon a roll call of the convention and the Republican party placed itself squarely upon record in favor of concealing the names of the contributors, and the amounts of their subscriptions.

"It is eminently proper that this convention should define the Democratic attitude toward the regulation of transportation companies and call the attention of the country to the indisputable fact that it was only after years of Democratic effort that an amendment was made to the interstate commerce law authorizing the commission to establish reasonable rates whenever it appeared that an existing schedule was unjust and unreasonable. The national platforms of the Republican party remained silent upon this great question for years and the fact that the necessary change was advocated by a Republican president, who succeeded only through the aid of the Democrats in both branches of congress in placing the amendment upon our statute books, does not affect the credit to which our party is entitled for having worked persistently for such an enactment. Further amendment to our laws giving the federal government supervision over the issuance of railroad stocks and bonds is demanded.

"We search in vain for one syllable in the Chicago platform pledging the Republican party to retrenchment and reforms; and it is no mere coincidence that has given us a billion dollar session of congress on the eve of a national election and the possible revision of the tariff.

"So long as we maintain the present method of electing United States senators we cannot hope that the upper chamber of congress will reflect the popular will. The Democratic party will continue to labor for the direct election of United States senators and it appeals to the voters of all America to elect members of the different state legislatures who will pledge themselves to vote for no candidate for the United States senate that is not in favor of this reform. The affirmative position of the Democratic party upon these great questions will be made clear during the impending campaign, and disdaining all subterfuges it will speak in a language that cannot be misunderstood. Its voice will ring with a genuine love for humanity and the charge of insincerity will never be brought to its doors. Let our party declaration in this convention present the strong contrast between that which we here propose and that which was declared at Chicago. Let any man take the temperature of the Chicago platform and discover, if he can, any sign of human warmth. Not a single sentiment is there to redeem it from the materialism permeating it through and through.

"This national convention meets at a time when the angel of peace is hovering over the entire world and the nations of the world each day are strengthening those ties of friendship and common interest that will render war less frequent and permit mankind to turn their hands to the peaceable pursuits of life rather than to the destruction of one another.

"The Democratic party realizes the part that America must inevitably play in the affairs of the world, and that we cannot escape participation in the settlement of every world problem that arises; but America's weight and influence must ever be on the side of peace, on the side of justice, on the side of the oppressed; and if the will of the people shall commit to our hands the sceptre of power, it will be used for the realization of the high American ideals that raise our own people to loftier and better things and through our precepts and examples contribute to the well being and happiness of all mankind."

ROOSEVELT VISITS PEARY

President Inspects Vessel That Is Named After Him.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 8.—"My, my, what a fine ship," remarked President Roosevelt as he approached the Arctic steamer Roosevelt lying at anchor near the president's yacht Sylph in Oyster Bay harbor. Commander Robert E. Peary, U. S. N., the Arctic explorer, who was at his side, agreed with the president and thanked him for the compliment. The Sylph's launch Gleam steamed around the stern and alongside the port side of the Roosevelt. On board the little craft were President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Commander and Mrs. Peary, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Roosevelt, Quenth Roosevelt, the president's youngest son, several guests and Lieutenant Commander Williams of the Sylph. President Roosevelt, dressed in a white duck suit, was the first to scramble up the Roosevelt's ladder. Then came Commander Peary. They assisted the ladies aboard and the inspection of the exploring craft began.

Captain Bartlett of the Roosevelt and Herbert L. Bridgeman, secretary of the Peary Arctic club, received them on board. In another launch came the president's sons, Kermit and Archie, accompanied by several boys. Captain Bartlett had dressed the ship in honor of the visit of the president. Every available boat in the harbor was pressed into service as persons desiring to see the Roosevelt and when the president's party went aboard, the water around about the ship was crowded with pleasure craft.

Will Entertain the Natives.

Commander Peary escorted the party into the deckhouse and to his cabin. There they saw many books, a piano and mechanical player and a phonograph. The explorer said that from these things the members of the expedition would derive amusement during the trip and besides they would help to entertain the natives of the Far North. The visitors then inspected the ship.

Climbing upon the forecastle deck, the president found the crew of the Roosevelt lined up. He was introduced to each individually.

Commander Peary said his last goodbye to the president as Mr. Roosevelt was about to go over the side into the launch. He shook hands with the explorer, saying that hunting the pole is good sport and he wished Commander Peary good luck.

When all of the president's party were safely in the launch it darted away to the Sagamore Hill pier. Commander Peary, accompanied by Mrs. Peary and Herbert L. Bridgeman, took another launch to the town and boarded the train for New York.

The Roosevelt then weighed anchor and steamed out of the harbor. She will stop at New Bedford, Mass., and then proceed to Sydney, N. S., where Commander Peary will rejoin the ship.

"Approaching our great task in a manly, dignified manner, imbued with the loftiest sentiments of patriotism, ambitious to throw every safeguard around the liberties of our people, determined to stamp out the abuses that are consuming the substance of the nation, let us proceed to our appointed duty with the sustaining consciousness that we are responsible alone to God and to our country for the justice of our cause.

"There are three things that this convention should do. It ought to present in a plain and intelligent manner the serious industrial and present conditions that are disturbing the peace and happiness of our country. We should then proceed to a courageous exposure of the Republican policies that are co-operating with private greed in the general oppression of the people. Most important of all, we must exhibit a readiness and an ability to grasp the problems of the hour and to effect their solution in a manner that will satisfy the sober, common sense of the multitudes whose interests are at stake.

"Among the great evils that afflict the country at the present time is the abuse of corporate power. At first the advancing aggressions of the corporations are not discernible to the common eye, for every move is carefully covered up until sufficient political strength is attained to defy the protests of the people. Thus the constant and insidious invasion of the people's rights finally results in a species of arrogance and defiance so formidable in its appearance that the body of the people, in fear of even worse aggressions, hesitate to exercise their rightful authority over these colossal enemies of the commonwealth. And so we behold a subversion of our free institutions, a government voluntarily subordinating itself to selfish, private ends, special privileges resorting to cunning, bribery and intimidation to maintain its unholy power, while the masses timidly ask that when avarice has at last reached the point of satiety it will then benevolently permit the people to resume their rightful share in the government themselves.

"The Democratic party is not an enemy of all corporations. It recognizes their great value in the industrial world. Through the agency of incorporation scattered wealth is brought together and given a driving force that it would not otherwise possess. Great enterprises are thereby undertaken and the undeveloped resources of the country added to the wealth of the world. No rational man can be opposed to corporations as such and the assertion that the Democratic party is waging an indiscriminate war against this convenient form of transacting business has no foundation in fact. It is the abuse only of corporate power that we seek to eliminate.

"We are confronted with the inquiry, what assurance has the Republican party given that it will use the forces at its command to restore the people to their rights? In its Chicago platform it did not make even a decent pretense of championing the people's cause and the proceedings of that convention are glaringly insincere. It was noted that the elements were present in that gathering, one with sufficient votes to adopt a platform and name its candidate for president, the other powerful enough to unwrite that platform and tie the hands of the nominee. The distinguishing feature of the Chicago platform is its off-repeated promise to do a lot of things that the Republican party has heretofore failed to do. That party went to Chicago fresh from the halls of congress, where an overwhelming Republican majority in both branches enabled it to propose to and adopt any legislation that it chose. Does the Republican party believe that it can be absolved from its dereliction of duty by an empty promise to do in the future what it has willfully failed to do in the past?

"Some one suggested that this convention should publish an indictment against the Republican party. We can probably expedite the proceedings by entering the plea of guilty that is contained in the Chicago platform, simply changing the words 'We will' to the words 'We did not' to conform to the admitted facts. We then have the following confession of guilt:

"We did not revise the tariff."

"We did not amend the anti-trust laws to secure greater effectiveness in the prosecution of criminal monopolies."

"We did not add a single line to the interstate commerce law, giving the federal government supervision over the issues of stocks and bonds by interstate carriers."

"We did not exact a currency measure that would mitigate the evils of a financial panic such as has recently protracted the country under a Republican administration."

"We did not limit the opportunities for abusing the writ of injunction."

"We did not establish postal savings banks."

"We did not establish a bureau of mines and mining."

"We did not admit into the union the territories of New Mexico and Arizona as separate states."

"The last congress was in session during a financial crisis when innumerable banking institutions, preferring a holiday to a funeral, closed their doors and filled the minds of the millions of depositors with anxiety and fear. The sentiment in favor of postal savings banks which had been steadily growing in this country, became almost universal during the recent panic. So insistent became the voice of the people that the president sent a special message to congress urging the establishment of postal savings banks where the earnings of our people might be safely deposited under the direct control and responsibility of the federal government, and where no speculating bank cashier or any member of the board of directors could eat up the savings of years."

"The United States senate showed its hearty sympathy with this popular demand and its profound respect for the president by adjourning the senate while the message was being read, while over in the house of representatives they refused to suspend the roll call of the house to receive the communication which had been sent there from the White House."

"The Chicago platform points with pride to the passage of a child labor law for the District of Columbia. Let the Republican party go further than the enactment of penal laws and in the name of humanity use its vast energies for the removal of the conditions that are forcing our children into the labor market. It is the reign of monopoly that is emptying our school houses and filling the sweat shops with child labor and this same system of monopoly is fast limiting the opportunities for independent livelihood among those who are forced into the industrial field and thus it is doubly blighting that hope of youth which in former stages of our national growth opened an avenue of honor and independence to every child upon our soil."

"The most palpable instance of the insincerity of the Chicago platform is found in its declaration respecting the issuance of injunctions. It would have been entitled to more respect if it had omitted all mention of it. At session after session of congress, labor has pleaded for relief from the abuses of injunctions, but its appeals have fallen on deaf ears and there has been no indication that remedial legislation of any character would be enacted. The oligarchy in house and senate has decided that nothing shall be done to weaken any advantage that corporations have gained in labor disputes."

"The charge that the courts are being assailed is simply made for the purpose of diverting attention from the real issue. Heretofore it has not been considered treason or an unwarrantable attack upon the honor of the courts to define their jurisdiction, prescribe their procedure, restrict their processes and generally to fix the bounds with which judicial functions shall be exercised."

"It makes no difference whether the courts are acting in excess of their jurisdiction or strictly within their delegated powers. In either case the people have a right to throw additional safeguards around human liberty. There can be no reflection upon the honesty of the courts in the passage of a measure that will confine the equity powers of the federal judiciary within such bounds as the people of the United States, through the legislative branches of their government may determine. This Democratic convention must formally and unequivocally pledge itself to such legislation as will prevent the writ of injunction from being converted into an instrument of oppression."

"We have something to do in this convention besides pointing out evils and taking the Republican party to task for the part it has played in creating and perpetrating abuses. Democracy is once more called to the front to battle for the secret principles of self-government. It must wage an uncompromising war for the return of the government to the hands of the people, and this means that the phalanx of special interest must be broken. With the power and opportunity to carry out Democratic principles, we will be called upon to revise our tariff laws in the interests of the whole people. This issue cannot be disposed of by the assertion that the Republican party also stands for tariff reform. Republican revision and Democratic revision are two different things.

"The Democratic idea is that where tariff enables the trusts to maintain a system of extortion the duty should be removed from all trust-made goods, so that competition from abroad may compel reasonable prices to our own people. There is a vast difference between the protection of American industries and the protection of criminal monopolies."

"The expense of our government, even when most economically administered will always require substantial tariff rates, for the customs duties will always be our chief source of revenue. The amount and distribution of these rates must always be delivered along equitable lines, keeping in view the greatest happiness to the greatest number and particularly withholding the shelter of the tariff from those who use it, not for legitimate self protection, but for the criminal purpose of extorting the last dollar from the American consumer."

"The corrupt use of large sums of money in political campaigns is largely responsible for the subversion of the people's will at the polls. The masses are awakening to a realization of the great power of gold in contests that ought to be determined according to the character of nominees and the soundness and morality of political issues; and there is a general demand for publicity in the collection and use of campaign funds so that our citizens may know whether a political party has purchased its way into office or has won its victories by honest means."

"In the Chicago convention a minority report of the committee on resolutions, containing a declaration in favor of publicity was overwhelmingly defeated upon a roll call of the convention and the Republican party placed itself squarely upon record in favor of concealing the names of the contributors, and the amounts of their subscriptions."

"It is eminently proper that this convention should define the Democratic attitude toward the regulation of transportation companies and call the attention of the country to the indisputable fact that it was only after years of Democratic effort that an amendment was made to the interstate commerce law authorizing the commission to establish reasonable rates whenever it appeared that an existing schedule was unjust and unreasonable. The national platforms of the Republican party remained silent upon this great question for years and the fact that the necessary change was advocated by a Republican president, who succeeded only through the aid of the Democrats in both branches of congress in placing the amendment upon our statute books, does not affect the credit to which our party is entitled for having worked persistently for such an enactment. Further amendment to our laws giving the federal government supervision over the issuance of railroad stocks and bonds is demanded."

"So long as we maintain the present method of electing United States senators we cannot hope that the upper chamber of congress will reflect the popular will. The Democratic party will continue to labor for the direct election of United States senators and it appeals to the voters of all America to elect members of the different state legislatures who will pledge themselves to vote for no candidate for the United States senate that is not in favor of this reform. The affirmative position of the Democratic party upon these great questions will be made clear during the impending campaign, and disdaining all subtleties it will speak in a language that cannot be misunderstood. Its voice will ring with a genuine love for humanity and the charge of insincerity will never be brought to its doors. Let our party declaration in this convention present the strong contrast between that which we here propose and that which was declared at Chicago. Let any man take the temperature of the Chicago platform and discover, if he can, any sign of human warmth. Not a single sentiment is there to redeem it from the materialism permeating it through and through."

"The Democratic party realizes the part that America must inevitably play in the affairs of the world, and that we cannot escape participation in the settlement of every world problem that arises; but America's weight and influence must ever be on the side of peace, on the side of justice, on the side of the oppressed; and if the will of the people shall commit to our hands the sceptre of power, it will be used for the realization of the high American ideals that raise our own people to loftier and better things and through our precepts and examples contribute to the well being and happiness of all mankind."

ROOSEVELT VISITS PEARY

President Inspects Vessel That Is Named After Him.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 8.—"My, my, what a fine ship," remarked President Roosevelt as he approached the Arctic steamer Roosevelt lying at anchor near the president's yacht Sylph in Oyster Bay harbor. Commander Robert E. Peary, U. S. N., the Arctic explorer, who was at his side, agreed with the president and thanked him for the compliment. The Sylph's launch Glean steamed around the stern and alongside the port side of the Roosevelt. On board the little craft were President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Commander and Mrs. Peary, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Roosevelt, Quentin Roosevelt, the president's youngest son, several guests and Lieutenant Commander Williams of the Sylph. President Roosevelt, dressed in a white duck suit, was the first to scramble up the Roosevelt's ladder. Then came Commander Peary. They assisted the ladies aboard and the inspection of the exploring craft began.

Captain Bartlett of the Roosevelt and Herbert L. Bridgeman, secretary of the Peary Arctic club, received them on board. In another launch came the president's sons, Kermitt and Archie, accompanied by several boys. Captain Bartlett had dressed the ship in honor of the visit of the president. Every available boat in the harbor was pressed into service as persons desiring to see the Roosevelt and when the president's party went aboard, the water around about the ship was crowded with pleasure craft.

Will Entertain the Natives.

Commander Peary escorted the party into the deckhouse and to his cabin. There they saw many books, a piano and mechanical player and a phonograph. The explorer said that from these things the members of the expedition would derive amusement during the trip and besides they would help to entertain the natives of the Far North. The visitors then inspected the ship.

Climbing upon the fore-castle deck, the president found the crew of the Roosevelt lined up. He was introduced to each individually.

Commander Peary said his last goodbye to the president as Mr. Roosevelt was about to go over the side into the launch. He shook hands with the explorer, saying that hunting the pole is good sport and he wished Commander Peary good luck.

When all of the president's party were safely in the launch it darted away to the Sagamore Hill pier. Commander Peary, accompanied by Mrs. Peary and Herbert L. Bridgeman, took another launch to the town and boarded the train for New York.

The Roosevelt then weighed anchor and steamed out of the harbor. She will stop at New Bedford, Mass., and then proceed to Sydney, N. S., where Commander Peary will rejoin the ship.

VOCATION BUREAU.

Organization to Aid Young People in Choosing Their Life Work.

"One of Boston's wealthiest society leaders, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, recently made possible an organization, the first of its kind ever undertaken, to be known as the 'Vocation bureau,' designed to aid young people in choosing and preparing for the occupation to which they are the best fitted in life and to find openings for those thus assisted in their chosen field of work."

During a discussion of the problem Samuel R. Emmons of Boston, who is a banker, but takes a deep interest in the employment of the young, made this statement:

"This unique plan was originated by Professor Frank Parsons, former instructor in law at the Boston university and writer of a number of books upon sociological and economic questions, now the director of the bureau. The bureau has been put into practical working order through the philanthropy of Mrs. Shaw, the work of Professor Parsons and the co-operation of a body of the foremost civic, sociological and educational leaders in Boston."

"In aim the bureau proposes to place upon a scientific basis as nearly as possible the choice and preparation for a career among people of all conditions and classes."

"One of the ultimate intents of the bureau is to introduce its system into the public schools of the city, where it shall become a part of the curriculum. The vocation bureau aims to help two great classes of people seeking a proper career—namely, the immature boy or girl who has not arrived at the age where experience has enabled him or her to choose intelligently and older people who seek counsel as to opportunities and resources for the betterment of their condition and the means of increasing their earning efficiency. The bureau does not attempt to decide for any boy what occupation he should choose, but aims to help him to investigate the subject and come to a conclusion on his own account. In this respect the counselors to whom the applicant comes first make a careful examination as to the education, experience, resources and limitations of the person under consideration. Personal interviews, printed helps, tests of the character, memory and temperamental qualities are given, and an analysis of each case is made as completely as the projectors of the bureau can make it."

WORRYING AMERICA'S SIN.

Clergyman Says It Is National Disease
Sapping Our Life.

"Americanitis is the great disease of the people of this country," said the Rev. W. F. Wakeham of Portchester, Conn., in a sermon on "The Sin of Worrying" in the Greenwich (Conn.) First Methodist Episcopal church the other morning.

"Americanitis," he explained, "was the act of worrying over everything. In France licentiousness is sapping the life of its people, in England drunkenness is working its ruin, and in America worrying is killing the country."

"The housewife preparing courses for the table worries for something new. The lady of fashion worries because a hat is too large or because it is stylish and not becoming. A merchant worries over finances and takes his worry home to bed with him, thereby depriving his family of what pleasure there is in seeing him."

"It is worry over this and worry over that continually, and the country is rapidly becoming peevish and fretful, and crimes are being committed continually by the men and women who worry."

The World's Icebox.

We might call Greenland the world's icebox. If you glance at the map, you will see that the state of New York, large as it seems to us, is not over one-twentieth of the size of Greenland, for New York contains only 47,000 square miles. Then think that the glaciers are steadily moving away from the center of Greenland, really being crowded off the land, and it will not seem so strange that here is the birthplace of nearly all of the icebergs that are so feared by the mariner.—Day Allen Willey in St. Nicholas.

Next Meeting at Walker

The next meeting of the Upper Mississippi Medical Society will be held at Walker, Minn., July 21. The program will be a symposium of tuberculosis and clinic, and will be conducted under the auspices of the above society. The clinic proper will be conducted by Dr. Walter J. Marcey, at the Sanitarium for consumptives at Walker, with all its available material of the most valuable kind, the kind that can be cured, a feature of this institution, and an opportunity will be given to inspect the work which is being done there.

Bids Wanted

Bids will be received by the building committee of the Board of Education up to 8 o'clock p. m. Thursday evening, July 9th, 1908, for sizing and kalsomine or papering the various school rooms according to the instructions of the committee, bids to be left at the secretary's office in the store of L. F. Hohman, No. 618 Front street, or with the undersigned.

The committee reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

DAME RUMOR

PELICAN CREEK RIFLES

The first logs sluiced through the government dam at Pine River this season was yesterday. Joe Carmalt pulled in from White Fish lake.

Work on the government dikes is progressing very good under the foreman, H. G. Fenn. He has got about eighty men, sixteen head of horses and a stationary engine to haul dirt. They are working on dike No. 11.

The farmers ought to feel proud of their crops in this part of Crow Wing Co. Wheat, oats and rye never looked better. Some is a little backward but with the leaps and bounds it has taken in the last ten days it will be out of the way by Sept. 15th. Potatoes and all garden truck looks well, also hay crop is good.

We have just received word that Joe Kimball was severely hurt while working a hoister at Akeley, and he is now at his son's home in Deer River.

Ida, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Ostlund, who died of pneumonia and heart trouble Tuesday, June 30th was buried July 2d in the Watertown cemetery, she being the first one to be interred in the new cemetery. All the family were at home when she passed away. Hilma, a sister that lives in Minneapolis came up. There were six of her school mates pall bearers, Belle, Florence and Ethel McKay, Henrietta Voshell, Greta Hazelhurst and Hazel Kimball, all dressed in white as she requested. Services were conducted by Rev. B. A. Barker of Pine River. Her age was 19 years.

Heart Strength

Heart strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. A DOCTOR'S PRESCRIPTION.

A doctor's prescription was taken to a drug store at Superior, Wis., seven years ago. The druggist "filled" the prescription then, put it on file and numbered it 6088. Since that time "Sixty Eighty-Eight," as this great medicine is called (6088) has cured thousands of cases of rheumatism, catarrh, backache, kidney trouble and other blood disorders. Modern medical science proves that a medicine which purifies the blood, removing the uric acid and other poisonous elements, is the only kind that can actually drive rheumatism out of the system. Liniments may relieve the pain for a time, but to cure, as 6088 cures, the blood must be purified. When the blood is pure nature soon makes the sufferer well.

John McCoy of Duluth, tells the story of what 6088 did for him. He wrote a letter as follows:

"I consider it my duty to my fellow-men, to recommend your great Blood and Rheumatic Cure, 6088, to any person suffering with rheumatism, as it has done me more good than anything I ever took for that trouble. I am able to do a day's work now, and eighteen months ago I was helpless and suffering torments."

SHOWS WERE WELL PATRONIZED

Laurel Street Was Thronged with People Who Seemed to Enjoy Themselves

WEATHER PROVES FAVORABLE

Committee of Park Improvement Association Gratified with the Outlook

The crowd was so dense on Laurel street last night that it was at times almost impossible to make any headway through it. The shows with the exception of Thelma, which only arrived yesterday, were all well patronized and gave good satisfaction so far as could be learned. There was satisfaction expressed by the committee of the Park Improvement association over the results so far and with the fine weather today and the prospects for good weather tomorrow the outlook is favorable for a good clean up for the benefit of the parks.

TO SING AT CHAUTAUQUA

Senator Alderman Left for Fairmont Today to Sing at the Chautauqua at that Place

Senator S. F. Alderman left for Fairmont, Minn., today where he will sing in the Chautauqua program for Thursday evening, Friday afternoon and evening and Saturday afternoon of this week. The Chautauqua has a strong force of speakers including Congressman Tawney, Gov. Hoch, of Kansas, Richard P. Hobson and others. Mr. Alderman will certainly do his share of the entertaining and is getting a wide reputation as a singer.

Another fattening of the batting average for the North Star Juniors is about all that need be said of last night's game with the Y. M. C. A. team as the score of 19 to 7 will help to show. Some complaint was made on the umpire, but any team will find some point to argue over concerning an umpire's work. A goodly number of costly errors helped to lose the game.

Loom who caught for the "Y" had an ugly accident in the last of the game, a ball hitting him square on the end of the right thumb and threw it out of joint but he had nerve enough to pull it back himself. Score by innings:

VOCATION BUREAU.

Organization to Aid Young People in Choosing Their Life Work.

"One of Boston's wealthiest society leaders, Mrs. Quincy A. Shaw, recently made possible an organization, the first of its kind ever undertaken, to be known as the 'Vocation bureau,' designed to aid young people in choosing and preparing for the occupation to which they are the best fitted in life and to find openings for those thus assisted in their chosen field of work."

During a discussion of the problem Samuel R. Emmons of Boston, who is a banker, but takes a deep interest in the employment of the young, made this statement:

"This unique plan was originated by Professor Frank Parsons, former instructor in law at the Boston university and writer of a number of books upon sociological and economic questions, now the director of the bureau. The bureau has been put into practical working order through the philanthropy of Mrs. Shaw, the work of Professor Parsons and the co-operation of a body of the foremost civic, sociological and educational leaders in Boston."

"In aim the bureau proposes to place upon a scientific basis as nearly as possible the choice and preparation for a career among people of all conditions and classes."

"One of the ultimate intents of the bureau is to introduce its system into the public schools of the city, where it shall become a part of the curriculum. The vocation bureau aims to help two great classes of people seeking a proper career—namely, the immature boy or girl who has not arrived at the age where experience has enabled him or her to choose intelligently and older people who seek counsel as to opportunities and resources for the betterment of their condition and the means of increasing their earning efficiency. The bureau does not attempt to decide for any boy what occupation he should choose, but aims to help him to investigate the subject and come to a conclusion on his own account. In this respect the counselors to whom the applicant comes first make a careful examination as to the education, experience, resources and limitations of the person under consideration. Personal interviews, printed helps, tests of the character, memory and temperamental qualities are given, and an analysis of each case is made as completely as the projectors of the bureau can make it."

WORRYING AMERICA'S SIN.

Clergyman Says It Is National Disease Sapping Our Life.

"Americanitis is the great disease of the people of this country," said the Rev. W. F. Wakeham of Portchester, Conn., in a sermon on "The Sin of Worrying" in the Greenwich (Conn.) First Methodist Episcopal church the other morning.

"Americanitis," he explained, "was the act of worrying over everything. 'In France licentiousness is sapping the life of its people, in England drunkenness is working its ruin, and in America worrying is killing the country."

"The housewife preparing courses for the table worries for something new. The lady of fashion worries because a hat is too large or because it is stylish and not becoming. A merchant worries over finances and takes his worry home to bed with him, thereby depriving his family of what pleasure there is in seeing him."

"It is worry over this and worry over that continually, and the country is rapidly becoming peevish and fretful, and crimes are being committed continually by the men and women who worry."

The World's Icebox.

We might call Greenland the world's icebox. If you glance at the map, you will see that the state of New York, large as it seems to us, is not over one-twentieth of the size of Greenland, for New York contains only 47,000 square miles. Then think that the glaciers are steadily moving away from the center of Greenland, really being crowded off the land, and it will not seem so strange that here is the birthplace of nearly all of the icebergs that are so feared by the mariner.—Day Allen Willey in St. Nicholas.

Next Meeting at Walker

The next meeting of the Upper Mississippi Medical Society will be held at Walker, Minn., July 21. The program will be a symposium of tuberculosis and clinic, and will be conducted under the auspices of the above society. The clinic proper will be conducted by Dr. Walter J. Marcey, at the Sanitarium for consumptives at Walker, with all its available material of the most valuable kind, the kind that can be cured, a feature of this institution, and an opportunity will be given to inspect the work which is being done there.

Bids Wanted

Bids will be received by the building committee of the Board of Education up to 8 o'clock p. m. Thursday evening, July 9th, 1908, for sizing and kalsomine or papering the various school rooms according to the instructions of the committee, bids to be left at the secretary's office in the store of L. F. Hohman, No. 618 Front street, or with the undersigned.

The committee reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Dated July 6th, 1908.

Heart Strength

Heart strength, or heart weakness, means nerve strength, or nerve weakness—nothing more. Potently, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds; it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, with

PELICAN CREEK RIFFLES

The first logs sluiced through the government dam at Pine River this season was yesterday. Joe Carmalt pulled in from White Fish lake.

Work on the government dikes is progressing very good under the foreman, H. G. Fenn. He has got about eighty men, sixteen head of horses and a stationary engine to haul dirt. They are working on dike No. 11.

The farmers ought to feel proud of their crops in this part of Crow Wing Co. Wheat, oats and rye never looked better. Some is a little backward but with the leaps and bounds it has taken in the last ten days it will be out of the way by Sept. 15th. Potatoes and all garden truck looks well, also hay crop is good.

We have just received word that Joe Kimball was severely hurt while working a hoister at Akeley, and he is now at his son's home in Deer River.

Ida, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Ostlund, who died of pneumonia and heart trouble Tuesday, June 30th was buried July 2d in the Watertown cemetery, she being the first one to be interred in the new cemetery. All the family were at home when she passed away. Hilma, a sister that lives in Minneapolis came up. There were six of her school mates pall bearers, Belle, Florence and Ethel McKay, Henrietta Voshell, Greta Hazelhurst and Hazel Kimball, all dressed in white as she requested. Services were conducted by Rev. B. A. Barker of Pine River. Her age was 19 years.
